On Sunday "L'Abbe Constantin" will be given at the afternoon performance. Ladies are requested not to wear hats.

Yesterday's bulletin reports one death at Semalut and one case at Deirout.

Khedivial Decorations.—The King has been pleased to give and grant unto Thomas Wheeler, Esq., Sub-Controller of Accounts, Egyptian Railway Administration, His Majesty's Royal licence and authority to accept and wear the insignia of the Fourth Class of the Imperial Ottoman Order of the Medjidieh, conferred upon him by His Highness the Khedive of Egypt, authorized by his Imperial Majesty the Sultan of Turkey, in recognition of valuable services rendered by him.

Guide to Egypt.—The eleventh edition of Mr. Halli J. Kennell's "The Standard Guide to Egypt and the Sudan," which formerly bore the name of "Cairo and Egypt and Life in the Land of the Pharaohs," will prove a most valuable hand book to all who visit this country and also to residents. It contains much valuable information in a concise form and its descriptive articles are interesting reading. An interesting feature of the book is an account of a trip up the Nile by Sir George Newnes, Bart. M.P., entitled from Cairo to Catania.

Farewell Concert.—A farewell smoking concert was given by the members of the Army Service Corps Sergeants mess, Kasr el Nil, last Tuesday evening in honour of members leaving for home with the S.S. "Soudan." Staff Sergeant Major Armstrong presided over a large gathering, representatives of every unit in the Garrison being present, and was supported by Captain Duffus and Captain Crawley. Colonel Ludlow sent a letter expressing regret at his inability to be present, also Major Mylrea, who was unavoidably absent through illness. After the usual toasts had been given and honoured, that of "Departing Members" was given in connection with which Captain Duffus and Captain Crawley spoke at length. The remainder of the evening was given up to harmony and an excellent programme passed away a very pleasant evening.

The Tour Eiffel.—Last night the curtain of the Tour Eiffel rose to a crowded house, which received the Dharvier French operetta troupe most warmly. The occasion was the production of a local "revue" "Alexandria, tout le monde debauche" by Mr. J. Provost, who as the compe took a very prominent part in the production. The music was arranged by Chevalier Ingento, master of the orchestra, and both his adaptation of well known airs and the manner in which he kept orchestra and chorus in hand were most creditable. Chevalier Ingento is undoubtedly a musician and he dealt very cleverly with the raw material which comes under his hands. The performance last night, if we overlook one or two first night blunders, was really quite good and the piece should have a long run. It is bright, lively, and witty, though there are a few points which might be expunged with advantage, but we will not deal with those until after a second visit to the performance. The costumes and staging were splendid.

THE KHEDEVE.

His Highness the Khedive received the following persons in audience yesterday morning: Sir Eldon Gorst who presented Mr. Sydney Lorne, Mustapha Maher Bey es Mudir of Minieh, Count de Bernstorff, Count de Vauxville. His Highness lunched with H.R.H. the Duke of Madrid at the Semiramis hotel and is entertaining the Duke to dinner at the palace of Koubbeh this evening. The Khedive attended midday prayers today at the mosque of Abu Ela.

BANK OF EGYPT.

It is gratifying to find that in spite of the financial troubles which have of late been experienced in this country, the Bank of Egypt is again in a position to make the handsome distribution of 18 per cent for the full twelve months. The official statement just issued states that, subject to the passing of the accounts by the auditors, the directors have decided to recommend the payment of a dividend of 10 per cent for the year 1907 of which an interim dividend of 4 per cent was paid on July 12th last; also a bonus of 90 per cent share, together 18 per cent for the year, leaving £36,476 after adding £200,000 to the reserve to be carried forward to the next account. A year ago £400,000 was added to reserve, and £1,417 was carried forward.

VICTORIA HOUSE.

Dear Sir, There are remains in the air as to the reorganization of the Victoria House, which apparently has come at all from all accounts. I should suggest that the formula of the Institution ought to be gone into first of all. What was its object, its constitution, etc. There must certainly be records of its original status. It was the outcome of subscriptions collected from the British community in 1867 in honour of our good Queen Victoria's 1st Jubilee and again in 1887 in honour of Her Majesty's Diamond Jubilee. Victoria, the Good's name is rightly surely to have had some philanthropic intention. As at present carried on it appears to me an ordinary boarding house, unendowed by the British Colony and free from rent. Any young governess or nurse unable to pay a guinea a week plus eggs for breakfast and a lamp in her room, cannot be admitted, by some regulation, quite as we must hope, in variance to the original constitution, which, as far as the older inhabitants can recollect, was intended to shelter young Englishwomen out of employment. Perhaps the British Consul can throw some light on the matter as there must be papers relating to the foundation of the Victoria House in 1867 pigeonholed safely somewhere. Yours faithfully, AN EARNEST ENQUIRER. Alexandria, 30th January.

WELCOME TO EGYPT.

"THE GREEN HOWARDS."

A FAMOUS AND HISTORIC REGIMENT.

The Alexandra, Princess of Wales's Own Yorkshire Regiment—popularly known as the "Green Howards"—the 1st Battalion of which arrived here yesterday in a very old and distinguished regiment, and possesses a most interesting history. The 1st Battalion came into existence in the closing weeks of 1688 when the Revolution had changed a dynasty. Foremost amongst the partisans of William of Orange was a certain Francis Luttrell, a Somersetshire gentleman. To assist the Prince of Orange, he at once set about raising a regiment for his service, and so enthusiastically did he work that in a very short space of time he had a ten company regiment organized, equipped and armed. The regiment joined the banner of the Prince at Exeter, and Luttrell became its first colonel.

A nucleus had previously existed in the shape of some independent companies which dated from the Seven Years' War. Its first service seems to have been abroad in the capacity of militia. A short spell of this service seems to have sufficed for in 1690 we find it in Ireland in William's army fighting gallantly at the Boyne and other actions. At the death of Luttrell, which shortly followed the Irish campaign, Sir Thomas Erle was appointed to the command, and he brought the regiment to Flanders where it gained laurels at Steenkirk, and Landen and many other actions of the period. Erle rose from a sick bed to lead it at Landen, and there was wounded badly whilst cheering on his men. It distinguished itself at the siege of Namur and came home to recruit in 1696. The regiment, which was subsequently numbered the 19th Regiment of Foot, had a considerable spell of home service after its adventures in Flanders.

The regiment served in the Cadix expedition, and at the capture of the Spanish treasure ships at Vigo in 1702, after which it went to the West Indies, whence it returned, and remained at home until the spring of 1709, when, at any rate, a part of it joined Marlborough's army in time to share in the famous victory at Malplaquet (11th September, 1709). At the storming of Douay it suffered loss. It was also at Bouchain, was prominently engaged, likewise, at Pont a Venclin, and in other actions in Marlborough's campaigns. After the peace of Utrecht the regiment was many years at home. About this time, from 1738 to 1748, it was commanded by Chas. Howard, second son of the third Earl of Carlisle, and one of George the Second's "captains." Having green facings, it became known as the "Green Howards," to distinguish it from the 60th, which were then known as "Howards," after their colonel, George Howard, who commanded that regiment for a long period. The regimental connection with Yorkshire probably commenced at this time, although the regiment did not receive its county title until 1782.

In 1774, the Regiment went to Flanders and there made a name for itself in many hard fought actions, notably at Fontenoy, where the British were badly deserted by their Dutch allies. Roucoux, Val, etc., against six times their own numbers. It was whilst on this service that fife was first introduced in the British service and the Green Howards were the first to use that musical instrument.

At the outbreak of the Seven Years' War it raised a second battalion, which was formed into the 66th Foot, and is now the 2nd Royal Berkshire Regiment late at Alexandria. The 19th, as the regiment now began to be called, took a prominent part in the famous siege and capture of Belle Isle, on the coast of Brittany, in 1761, and subsequently was stationed at Gibraltar, whence it returned home in 1771. It went out to Charleston, Carolina, in 1781, and was present in the affairs at Monk's Corny, the relief of Fort Ninety Six, and the action at Batavia Springs, and went through much harassing work up to the departure of the troops and "loyalists" in December, 1782, when it removed to Barbadoes, and ultimately to Jamaica, where it remained until 1791. At the outbreak of the French war the regiment formed part of the expedition which co-operated with the French Royalists at Quiberon, and afterwards landed at Ostend. It served the campaign of 1794 under the Duke of York, and shared in the disastrous winter retreat through Holland and Westphalia to Broom. Its record also shows good work at Newport and Guiderdalsen. In 1796 it went out to India, and soon after was sent to Ceylon. A detachment of five companies was sent to Madras in 1799, and took part in the capture of Seringapatam. These companies were intended to accompany Baird's expedition up the Red Sea to Egypt, but instead went back to Ceylon. The regiment was employed at Kandy at various times, the massacre of one of its detachments, in 1803, was of the most tragic character. The regiment was employed for some time in the Travancore district, and sent four companies to Isle Rodriguez, which took part in the capture of Mauritius (Isle of France), in 1810. It was also engaged in the Kandyan War of 1817-18-19, returning home in 1820, after twenty three years continuous service in Ceylon and the East Indies. It served in Demerara and the West Indies from 1826 to 1836, and in Malta, the Ionian Islands, the West Indies, and North America from 1840 to 1850.

At the outbreak of the Russian War, the 19th was despatched to the seat of war and earned new laurels at the Battle of Alma, where it suffered considerably in the attack of the Russian guns, it losing being two officers, and 39 non-commissioned officers and men killed and five officers and 174 non-commissioned officers and men wounded. At the "Soldier's Battle" of Inkerman the handful of the 19th—for war and disman had reduced it to a mere skeleton battalion—had their work cut out for them in stemming the tide of Russian soldiery which for hours threatened to annihilate the slender files opposed to it. Three companies rendered invaluable service in enabling General Codrington to hold the celebrated "Victoria Ridge" throughout the day, and other detachments covered themselves with glory, and lost heavily, nearly half their numbers killed or wounded. It served through out the siege of Sebastopol, taking part in the attack on the Quarries, and the assault on the Redan. In the latter storm, the heroic leadership was shown by Colonel "Lionel," commanding the 19th, and Colonel Withham, Assistant Quartermaster General. "My choice is made," said "Lionel," as he turned over the stalling; "I shall be the first man made the Redan." But fortune ordained it otherwise as he fell, badly wounded, early in the affair. Although the attack on the Redan was actually a failure, through no fault of the soldiers, the Russians were so impressed by the valour of the red coats that they evacuated Sebastopol the following morning. The 19th possesses some interesting relics of the Crimean War including the colour belt worn by Lieutenant Stockwell who fell at Alma whilst carrying the colours, and when his blood fell inleakable stains upon it, and also a set of Russian drums which still roll proudly at the head of the battalion on each 20th of September, when the regimental colour is trooped to commemorate that battle. On returning from the Crimea in 1856 the regiment had but a brief spell of peace service, being ordered out to India, to take part in the quelling of the Mutiny, remaining in India till 1873, during which period further honours were won in the Hamalia Expedition and the operations against the warrior tribes of the Black Mountain, gaining the thanks and praise of the Viceroy of India. The second battalion was added to the regiment in 1858. In 1881 the old number was discarded and the regiment received the designation of the Princess of Wales's Yorkshire Regiment. Three years later, the 1st battalion was engaged in the Nile expedition, and the subsequent Soudan Campaign, under General Sir E. Stephenson, being present at the action of Ginnis. Two years were spent on the banks of the Nile, and no battalion could wish for a harder time than fell to their lot in the waste of sand. In 1899 when the Boer War was looming the 1st Battalion was recalled home from Gibraltar and rapidly mobilized for active service. It embarked for the Cape on the 24th November, numbering 958 of all ranks under the command of Lieutenant Colonel H. Bowles. The mobilisation of the "Green Howards" made them a corps second to none in appearance, the average height being 5 ft. 9 inches. The battalion on arrival was despatched to the Colerberg district where General French was operating against the Boers, and getting their first taste of warfare at Slingsworthen, where D Co. was specially complimented by General French for their bravery in turning the Boers off the hills. After a month's hard fighting in the Colerberg district the battalion joined Robert's force who trapped wily Uzoop in the deep bed of the Modder River at Paardberg. The 19th formed part of the 18th Brigade and marched from Baslin on February 11th, and right on up to the 27th, when the Boers surrendered, it was long marching and hard fighting all the time. In the meantime the battalion had distinguished themselves at the fight for Kitchener's Kop, which resulted in the attempted relieving movement by De Wet being defeated.

Sergeant Major Pickard won the Distinguished Conduct Medal for his gallant leading of a party to turn some Boers off one of the lower crests of Kitchener's Kop. After the surrender of Cronje the battalion formed part of the force Lord Roberts led to Bloemfontein, and shared in the operations of Deinstonten. Paardberg cost the Green Howards 162 of all ranks, but the battalion went on and won three battle honours with the victorious British troops it entered Johannesburg and Pretoria, and in the operations in the Eastern Transvaal was present at the battles of Diamond Hill and Belfast. Long and tedious but valuable work was afterwards done in garrisoning the blockhouses, and when peace was proclaimed on June 1st, 1902, all were devoutly thankful. During those many, many months of active warfare the battalion lost 226 killed and wounded in action, and 92 died of disease, a heavy toll of brave men who have again shown how British soldiers can die and suffer in their country's cause.

The honours on the regimental colours of the Green Howards are Malplaquet, "Alma," "Inkerman," "Sevastopol," "Trafalgar," "South Africa, 1899-1902," "Relief of Kimberley" and "Paardberg," and they also bear the monogram of her Majesty, her coronet and the date 1875. The battalion bears a very fine reputation for efficiency and discipline and quite recently her Majesty presented colours to it at Buckingham Palace. Its record as a shooting battalion is an enviable one.

GENERAL AND MRS. BULLOCK "AT HOME."

The ball given on Wednesday night by Major General and Mrs. Bullock was the first large entertainment given this season at the General's house, and was held later than usual owing to the unfortunate illness of Mrs. Bullock, from which she is now happily recovered. It was in every way a most brilliant and successful function and was attended by very nearly five hundred of the best known residents and visitors in the place. The house is beautifully arranged for such entertainments, the drawing room making a finely proportioned dancing hall, and the ante-room, and passages, and staircases affording plenty of sitting out room. With such a crowd, dancing was continued under certain difficulties, though a perfect floor and excellent music tempted most people. General and Mrs. Bullock received their guests in the ante room and Mrs. Bullock and Miss Otway were everywhere, doing much to add to the enjoyment of the evening. The toilettes worn were all delightful, and many of the ladies wore magnificent jewels. The programme was a long one for Cairo, where generally people have to be content with some dozen dances, but the evening passed all too quickly nevertheless, in spite of many of the guests having been up late the night before. Indeed this dance was one of the pleasantest functions of the season, and General and Mrs. Bullock may rest satisfied in their minds that there was not one guest who did not enjoy him or herself. The following is as complete a list as possible of those who accepted their invitations:—

PERSONAL AND SOCIAL.

Lord Milner, who is at the Savoy Palace Hotel, will not leave Alexandria before Monday.

Prince Mohamed Khan and Prince Abdallah Mirza, Sir Robert Hay Drummond Hay, Mr. D. Erskine, M.P., Mr. Stuart Samuel, M.P., and the Rev. Canon Gough were among yesterday's departures from Alexandria by the Cairo.

Major-General Bullock is coming to Alexandria to-day and will stay at the New Khedivial Hotel.

Baron de Kessel Bey left yesterday by the S.S. "Cairo" for Marseille. The Baron is proceeding to England in order to make the necessary arrangements in connection with his daughters wedding which is to take place shortly in London.

Lieutenant and Assistant Commissary, of Ordnance A. Bargeant, A.O.D., has arrived from England in relief of Lieutenant and H.C.O.T. Rem. Mr. Sergeant is very well known in Egypt, this being the third occasion of his connection with the Army Ordnance Department in Egypt.

Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Lamplough are leaving for Upper Egypt by to-night's train-de-luxe. They will go straight to Assuan, where they will stay at the Cataract Hotel, and where Mr. Lamplough will exhibit some of his wonderful water colour drawings.

The dress which Mrs. Irene Harvey (Irene Osgood) of Guilborough Hall, wore at Shephard's grand annual ball was immensely admired by all present and it has occurred to us that our lady readers might like to have the technical description of same. It was copied by a firm of Parisian dressmakers from a Florentine portrait of a lady in Court dress of two centuries ago and was composed of a gown of moist silver cloth, cut in the Princess style, with a long train. Over this was hung a clinging drapery of fine Russian white net, most exquisitely hand-embroidered in frosted silver thread with opals, pearls, and diamonds, representing tropical foliage, tendrils, vines, leaves, fruit and flowers. The only inconvenience of this beautiful dress was the great weight of the embroideries, jewels, etc., and this added much to the fatigue of the lady's dation. With her dress Mrs. Harvey wore her world famous fire-opals as well as some of her diamonds. Her eiffere was a very simple one, but not the less effective on that account, and she had placed only one small diamond spray in her p. o. ears, ruddy hair.

ENGLISH COMPANIES IN EGYPT

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

Yesterday afternoon the British Consular Court at Alexandria pronounced judgment on a case of the highest importance to the many companies registered under the Egyptian Mining Law, but whose spheres of operations is in Egypt, and whose boards are wholly or partly composed of non-British directors. In this case, the English Consular Court at Alexandria, in the person of Mr. Alfred Nalman, the liquidator of that Company, on the grounds that he was administering the estate in the interests of the directors. The liquidator pleaded that the Consular Court was incompetent to decide the case. The Court held that inasmuch as the applicant was a British subject and the Company was a British subject under the Egyptian Mining Law, the English Consular Court, therefore, had jurisdiction. The liquidator then appealed to H.H.M.H.'s Supreme Consular Court for the Dominion of the Suddes (Suddes) Form and the appeal was heard in December last judge later applying the judgment of the lower court. Yesterday the original application was renewed before the Consular Court. Mr. Reginald Silley, with whom the liquidator appeared, was the applicant and the liquidator was represented by Mr. Whitworth. Mr. Reginald Silley argued that the liquidator should be removed on the grounds that he had shown partiality in favour of the non-British directors. The liquidator replied by referring to the fact that he had refused information to the present applicant and caused difficulties to shareholders in the obligation of their share warrants, thus preventing the shareholders from exercising their voting power they had and so increasing the influence of the Board, notably Messrs. Ardit.

A second point was that, Mr. Nalman, being a British subject, the Consular Court for the Companies Act for failure to comply with the same by a liquidator, could not be enforced against him personally. As an example counsel quoted section 15 of the Act of 1890, which imposed a penalty of £250 per day for non-compliance with the provisions of that Act. Mr. Silley then quoted the case of the Sir John Moore Gold Mining Company (reported in 12 Chancery Division, wherein a shareholder had applied for the removal of a liquidator on the grounds of his having refused information to the applicant and having expressed favourable views with regard to the conduct of the directors of the Company. This was sent to appeal and the late Lord Justice Jessel, Master of the Rolls, confirmed the removal of the liquidator on the above grounds. Mr. Silley furthermore contended that the present case was even stronger than the one cited inasmuch as the shareholders had in this case been notified to appear and object to the removal on the ground that they were not satisfied with the liquidator. Moreover, quoting the words of the learned Lord Justice, Mr. Silley contended that owing to his (the liquidator's) intimate connection with and favourable disposition towards the Directors, he was a person "entitled in the wide and general sense of the term to hold the position of liquidator." Counsel contended that this was sufficient without any moral impropriety on the part of the liquidator, which was not alleged in any way by the applicant.

Mr. Whitworth, for the defendant, contended that the affidavit filed was unreliable as evidence and furthermore that the only serious point was the alleged refusal of the liquidator to give information to the applicant. He quoted the case of the Alton Ryne Company Limited (reported in the Chancery Division), to show that the Court was bound to consider the real and substantial interests in the liquidation, and that therefore the Court should not act simply on the argument in the case quoted by the applicant.

Counsel contended that the written application for information had been made under a wrong section of the Act and so the liquidator was not bound to answer it. Mr. Whitworth went on to say that the case had been bolstered up by unauthorised reports in the newspapers, and asked the Court to express a strong opinion upon the case.

Mr. Silley in reply pointed out that the case quoted by the defendant was not in fact the previous decision because it merely gave additional reasons for removing a liquidator. Counsel contended that the applicant had acted with great public spirit in bringing this question of principle before the Court. He stated that he had been and about the facility afforded by English law in company formation, and foreigners, who took advantage of these facilities and enjoyed the privileges of English law, should be also made to feel the responsibilities of that law.

The Judge, in summing up, said that he had come to the conclusion that a case had been made out for the removal of the present liquidator if for no other reason than the facilities of enforcing penalties against a foreign liquidator dealing with assets of a British Company, who was a sufficient ground for removing him. In the opinion of the Court it was undesirable that the voluntary liquidation of a British Company should be confined to any but British subjects. The Court therefore ordered the removal of the present liquidator, but felt some difficulty in choosing there and there a successor. Counsel for the applicant submitted that under the section of the Act the Court must first proceed to nominate a liquidator and that, pending such nomination, he asked the Court to direct the Registrar to take possession of the books, papers, accounts and moneys of the Company. Mr. Nalman agreed to hand them over and the Court accordingly gave directions.

THE JOBS WERE ORDERED TO BE PAID OUT OF THE FUND OF THE COMPANY.

Now ensued a highly interesting episode. The Marshal of the Court, accompanied by Mr. Gooding, proceeded to the office of the Company which he found closed, with a notice on the door stating that the office was in the hands of Mr. Nalman. The Marshal and Mr. Gooding straightway proceeded to Mr. Nalman's office and demanded delivery of the books, etc. Mr. Nalman informed them that he was an Australian subject and did not give up the belongings of the Company.

If anything was wanted to justify the view of the Court as to the absolute necessity of the removal of Mr. Nalman, the ability of a foreigner to acquire legal assets of British Companies, Mr. Nalman's attitude provides a complete justification and will not, it is feared, in any way cause to allow the application of the public as to the state of this Company's affairs.

EGYPTIAN MINING.

Mr. John Wile, the late head of the now defunct Mining Department sends the following letter to "The Mining Engineer":

I was interested to your issue of the 12th inst. in reading the article on the Egyptian Department of Mines from a correspondent in Alexandria.

At a time when so many rumours more or less detrimental to mining interests in Egypt are being circulated, I may, perhaps, be forgiven for taking a somewhat personal interest in the subject.

Writing on behalf of the Government in July last made up their minds to reduce the establishment of the Departments of Mines, expressing the opinion that circumstances warranted the strictest economy in public finance, and that the present state of the mining industry in Egypt did not call for the full department of Mines which had been considered necessary to carry out the provisions of the Government to render every possible assistance and encouragement towards the development of the mineral industry as a whole rather than to speculate in gold mines only.

It is now that information has been received that a reduction came at an inopportune moment, and is, as I fully understood must be detrimental to the interests of mining in Egypt, coming at the moment when the old scheme of concessionary expiry and the new scheme of five year terms for all claims for prospecting and general licences, and, more especially, as the Department of Mines would have completed the issue and plotting of the data collected since the issue of 1902.

So far as the examination of the country has been made, there is no doubt that at one period in her history mining in Egypt was an important industry, giving employment to a large number of the population, and, more especially, when the Egyptians themselves recognised the development of the old mines which will amply attest their efforts in many instances to improve the country. It is, therefore, as can be deduced to take up the mineral industry so very material advance can reasonably be anticipated, except, perhaps, in a few special cases: this must be desired, peace (conspicuous) of the present state of the country, to the extent in the hands of those responsible for the administration of Egypt and their attitude towards industries other than agriculture. Much may be accomplished by a little sympathy and encouragement, and the Government, by its assistance and demonstration in the more commercial side of the industry, more especially in reference to cement, pottery, faience, and artificial manure.

Under the general policy prior to the present necessity for retrenchment in public finance, local subjects had been to take an intelligent interest in the possibilities of the mining industry, and at least one local syndicate is taking the necessary steps to develop the same, and demonstrates their potential value with the help of a few stamp prospect pits. Certainly it is the first local attempt, but it must not be forgotten that until the middle of 1897 such projects by local subjects was impossible, owing to the whole of the mineral belts being locked up in the hands of European syndicates holding huge areas under exclusive licence. Moreover, the Egyptian miners were a soiled book to inhabitants of the town on the Nile. It is not that they were not interested in the same, but they were so ignorant as to be unable to do so. It is not that they were so ignorant as to be unable to do so. It is not that they were so ignorant as to be unable to do so.

Six years ago hardly a native in Egypt understood anything about mines or mining. In fact, it was only by bolting out considerable numbers of labourers could be introduced to proceed underground at all, and the few felahs that could be persuaded to leave the Nile had a very real dread, not only of the hardships of the desert, but also of the danger they were from mistreatment by its inhabitants.

To-day, this is all changed; the felahs have no fear of the desert; on the other hand, he is, in his journeying, risking death by night in departing from his native land, lacking the local knowledge of the whereabouts of wells and water-beds. Among the natives who have been trained on the mines are many intelligent, easily taught, and do not require nearly so much assistance as is usually seen with our native races in Africa.

Local subjects and syndicates undertaking prospecting, and more especially the development of the mineral industry, are being fostered by the Government, and are being fostered by the Government, and are being fostered by the Government.

Local subjects and syndicates undertaking prospecting, and more especially the development of the mineral industry, are being fostered by the Government, and are being fostered by the Government, and are being fostered by the Government.

language are able to accomplish a much greater amount of work for an equal expenditure. Local subjects, however, yet lack the requisite technical knowledge of mining. Much of this could, however, be supplied in the first instance by the Government engineers and technical staff, and will be their final development, under which conditions there are many smaller mines which could be successfully operated by local residents and syndicates. From among them will be mines requiring more capital and skill for their final development, which, no doubt, would be readily forthcoming either from abroad or locally, assisted by expert European engineers, so soon as it is made clear that the cause of preliminary exploration and development was upon the shoulders of the Egyptian himself.

The public seldom trouble themselves to appreciate the local conditions and circumstances of a new field, and they certainly have not understood Egypt in regard to her mineral industry. To them, a "gold mine" is a "gold mine," and a new field means "gold mine," for the very good reason that the only advertisement in a field must be a portion or the whole of their wages (usually gold). The old, old story is repeated, the old, old game played to a public's benefit, when his palace is tickled with tales of wealth. It is said that the public are at times paid on. They do, and they do not, for those who learn to lay are for ever being replaced by those anxious to learn for themselves what the factors have already learnt.

Egypt possesses belts of gold, copper, lead, sulphur, phosphates, nitrates, chemicals, peridot, and many other minerals of commercial value. In her old mines she has also been able to produce more than sufficient to supply the public demand at times paid to pay if reasonably handled and capitalised, but the future of the industry lies in the hands of her own people, aided by local as well as outside capital, and whose interests are not so much in the due course of development.

In addition to the more hazardous side of her mineral industry, exemplified in the mineral content in the desert regions, Egypt possesses in the vicinity of the Nile settlements of considerable wealth in the development of the manufacture of cement, pottery, faience, chemical fertilisers, &c. Materials for these are in great abundance, and local labour more than sufficient to meet their development. Great strides in these latter would have been made during the next two years had the Government been able to carry on the general policy laid down for 1902 and 1903, not only with respect to their laboratory and pottery works (now lying idle, at Elfa has determined finally the commercial value of the clays, refractory and otherwise, but the staff of the department would have been able to devote to wide energy to the complete preliminary examination of the various mineral belts, phosphate and nitrate areas.

Maps are now available for practically the whole of the eastern desert, as a basis for correlation and plotting of the data collected during the last few years and a territory embracing some 70,000 square miles, utterly unknown to the public, and which, if properly developed, would be worth the cost of its preparation.

It is more than unfortunate that the Government should have felt compelled to economise at the site of the mining industry, as, in addition to giving a set-back to foreign interest, their action in taking away the support previously rendered will go far to hindering local capital and create a want of confidence among many who had begun to take an intelligent interest in the development of Egypt's resources other than agricultural farming, that they were assured of the best technical advice as to the value of their samples and for guidance in their preliminary explorations.

Fuel is, perhaps, the most difficult subject that local industries have to consider, still, the manufacture of cement in competition with imported cement has been found possible and there is no doubt that, serious as the present lack of fuel may be, it is not absolutely an insurmountable difficulty to the manufacture of many products locally in competition with imported articles of like nature.

CELEBRATION AT ASSOUAN

THE COPTIC PARTY

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT
Assouan 25th January.
Over one hundred copies of the German Emperor sat down to the banquet at the Savoy Hotel on the evening of the 27th and the scene in the great dining hall, which was beautifully decorated with flags and flowers, was one of the most brilliant ever witnessed at Assouan.

The organ of the Copts of Egypt, "Al Watan," says:
We are again reminded of certain attempts to form a distinctly Coptic party by the writings of certain confidants on the subject. It now appears that although our nation at large does not show the least interest in any of the recently advertised parties and has no wish to participate in the labours of those who interest themselves in these matters, yet there are individuals amongst us who have been infected with the latest craze and who think it possible and profitable that the Copts have a political party wholly officered and manned by Copts.

A Grand Mistake
For some years past Mrs. Amos's health had forbidden her wintering in England, and she spent the winter in Egypt, except that last year she made a prolonged tour round the world and in India.
An earnest, energetic, independent, and strong-willed spirit, at the same time warm-hearted and generous, she excited a very broad view of things with some very firmly-held convictions. Profoundly and confidently religious, and a sound Evangelical, she held very loosely to any traditions or conceptions either on political or ecclesiastical questions, and had a mind ever open to new discoveries and new opinions.

She has left a wide gap in the hearts of innumerable friends, and a few of whom have at one time or another looked upon her as their counsellor and leader, and whose consolation it will be that she has lived her life strenuously and done her work nobly during a period of twenty-two years of what was a widowhood indeed after an ideal marriage, and departed in peace in the land she best loved.

THE COTTON MARKET

KRAMSLEY AND CUNNINGHAM'S WEEKLY REPORT

LIVERPOOL, 25 January.
The demand for Egyptian Cotton this week has been very small and scarcely sufficient to test prices. Quotations are unchanged, except Yppers which are raised 1/4 per lb.
In Futures only a moderate business has been done, and the following are the latest values:
Jan. 9/28 Apr. 9/26 July 9/26 Oct. 9/22 Feb. 9/27 May 9/26 Aug. 9/26 Nov. 9/20 Mar. 9/27 June 9/26 Sept. 9/25
American Futures. The Market this week has been active, and prices have fluctuated frequently and shortly. To-day's closing values are 7 1/2 @ 9 points higher for the Old Crop position, except July August and August September which are respectively 1/2 and 1/4 points higher, whilst New Crop positions are only 2 points higher than those of last Thursday but about 10 points below the highest rates touched. The chief influence has undoubtedly been that attributed to a Bull clique in New York and New Orleans which, however, from the course of the market we should say has been met by considerable opposition, and the struggle is apparently likely to exist until other and more permanent influences are thrown into one scale or the other. The Bureau Census Ginner's report published here this afternoon estimates the amount ginned to the 16th instant as 10,387,000 bales, against 12,178,190 last year, and 9,989,634 the previous year. This estimate confirms the prediction of a crop round about 11 1/2 millions, and will we think be considered favorable to the market. Nothing is yet definitely arranged about the strike there is little apprehension however, but that a settlement will be arrived at.

TO OUR VISITORS.

The Egyptian Gazette has much pleasure in presenting to its subscribers the accompanying description of some of the many interesting routes by which they may travel homeward.

This depends partly upon the month in which you leave Egypt, for Cairo in January may be a little warmer than the Riviera and possibly not so warm as Sicily, but in March it will be warmer than Rome, and more uniformly warm than many other places in Europe.

The long sea routes—from Port Said or Alexandria to Plymouth, Southampton, London or Liverpool—occupy about 14 days. The shortest ones are as follows—

The steamers of the P. & O., the Egyptian Mail S.S. Co., North German Lloyd, Orient, and Messageries Maritimes are the largest.

The quickest through Continental routes are P. & O. British express from Port Said, by the Egyptian Mail S.S. Co. from Alexandria to Marseilles and the Austrian Lloyd Trieste-Vienna express from Alexandria.

Steamers "Oasis" and "Isis" to Brindisi. One of these leaves Port Said every week, as soon as possible after receiving the Indian mail from the great liner arrived from Bombay.
